

Definition:

An institution designed, equipped, and staffed to receive two or more persons for diagnosis, treatment and other health services under the supervision of a practitioner for periods continuing 24 hours or longer. Hospitals are further categorized into 6 types: Short Term , Rehabilitation, Children's, Long Term, Critical Access , Psychiatric

Exemption:

- Any hospital operated by the federal government.
- Components appropriately certified as other kinds of providers or suppliers. i.e., a Nursing Home, Home Health Agency, Rural Health Clinic, or Hospice.

Type Regulation:

State: An institution must obtain a permit.

Federal: An institution choosing to participate in federal programs must be certified.

Accredited Hospitals: A hospital accredited by JCAHO or AOA is deemed to meet all Medicare requirements for hospitals (except the requirements for Utilization Review, the special conditions for psychiatric hospitals, and the Skilled Nursing Facility Requirements for swing-bed designation). A percentage of deemed hospitals are surveyed each year to validate the survey results of the accrediting body. The state agency continues to investigate complaint surveys as directed by CMS.
